14:00: Session 3: GDPR: 4 year evaluation outcomes; update on enforcement initiatives

Has the GDPR been a success? Does it need to be reformed? How about enforcement in cross-border cases? In 2024 the Commission will publish its second evaluation of the GDPR and address these questions. Meanwhile, the European Data Protection Board, which gathers the data protection authorities of the 27 Member States, has signalled that the GDPR has been a success and does not need to be reformed. However, as early as 2022, the EDPB identified some inefficiencies in dealing with cross-border cases which resulted in the European Commission proposing a Regulation on procedural rules related to the GDPR enforcement to foster effective enforcement of data protection rules. The Proposal is making its way through the legislative process.

Isabelle Vereecken, Head of Secretariat, European Data Protection Board (EDPB) in conversation with Rosa Barcelo, Partner, McDermott Will & Emery; Chair, IIC Brussels Chapter

14:45: Session 4: Innovation and the interplay between regulator and orchestrator – are they mutually exclusive?

Ekaterine Imedadze, Commissioner, Georgian National Communications Commission

Bernardo Herman, Member of the Council, Belgian Institute for Postal services and Telecommunications (BIPT)

15:30: Networking Break

16:00: Session 5: Protecting children online: Making the most of the new regulatory era

Policymakers and parents are rightly concerned about the risks that children face online from harmful content and age-inappropriate experiences. Fortunately, policy has begun to catch-up and new regulatory instruments like the EU Digital Services Act and the UK Online Safety Act give regulators the tools they need to protect children online.

This session will hear from regulators on how they are leveraging their new regulatory powers and the implementation challenges they see. It will hear from companies who are responding to this new regulatory direction and who have to comply with rules across various jurisdictions. The interests of children themselves will be front-and-centre, and the panel will hear from civil society experts on how policy interventions can best account for the needs and welfare of children.

Agenda: Wednesday 13 March 2024

08:45: Registration and Refreshments

09:15: Welcome

Isolde Goggin, President, International Institute of Communications

09:30: Session 6: Changing media frameworks in Europe – what does this mean for regulators, broadcasters, streaming services and audiences?

Recent and forthcoming legislation, such as EFMA in the EU and the Media Bill in the UK, will modernise Europe's increasingly outdated media regulatory frameworks, addressing questions of media distribution, concentration and sustainability in an environment dominated by online content consumption. Panellists will give an overview of the key aspects of the new legislation, explore similarities and differences between the new frameworks, and consider the impact this could have on regulators, broadcasters, streaming services and audiences across Europe and beyond.

14:00: Session 8: AI use in media – recommendations for policy makers

Media play a key role in democratic societies. They act as purveyors of information, creators of forums for public debate, producers of cultural expressions, and public watchdogs. Technological developments have shaped, and continue to shape, the role of media. Increasingly, media sector is permeated by AI technologies, which impact the way media content is produced and disseminated. Multiple questions arise about the impact of AI on fundamental rights & societal issues. This session will focus on the journey towards policy recommendations for the use of AI in the media sector and other results developed in the AI4Media project, which will inform future EU policy and legal initiatives. The AI4Media project focuses on the next generation of AI advances for the Media sector that ensure the European values of ethics and trustworthiness.
